

On building information literacy skills

From TES: Digital Natives Woefully Unprepared to Sort Online Fact from Fiction in the Era of Fake News

From the Henchiner Report: A Shocking Number of Young People Can't Sort Fact From Fiction Online

On Guided Inquiry Design

From the University of Otago: Evaluating website content

Useful starting points for information gathering

The NZDF has lots of booklets, posters and guides. Teachers could place them within a 'book box' of useful resources for students to access. Order free online at drugfoundation.org.nz/resources

Odyssey has lots of informative resources and some great interactive guides: <http://www.odyssey.org.nz/>

Amplify! <http://www.amplify.org.nz/>

Alcohol Healthwatch's Alcohol in the Media clippings are a useful starting point for building folders of resources

Alcohol Action

WellPlace NZ

Alcohol.org.nz

Alcohol and Me - learning modules

No Safe Limit has excellent, easy to read resources about the latest drug research and policy

On search hints and strategies:

<http://www.popsci.com/google-search-tips-and-tricks>

<https://www.process.st/google-search-tips/>

Google's Search Engine lessons

On the alcohol industry

How alcohol industry organisations mislead the public about alcohol and cancer - full research article

Gaps in people's awareness of the links between alcohol and cancer